el amor personal como realidad profundamente humana ha sido poco explorado filosóficamente pese a su centralidad en la existencia personal no basta comprenderlo como pasión o sentimiento sino como condición esencial que integra todas las dimensiones de la persona en esta línea Julián Marías uno de los grandes filósofos españoles del siglo xx ofrece una reflexión original y rigurosa sobre el amor como fundamento de la vida personal su pensamiento enmarcado en la tradición personalista permite comprender el amor como acto propio del ser personal raíz de la plenitud la ilusión y la felicidad humanas a lo largo de su extensa obra Marías aborda el amor como eje transversal de su antropología para él la cuestión amorosa está vinculada a los grandes interrogantes del ser humano quién soy yo qué va a ser de mí hay algo más allá de esta vida de ahí que el amor revele la verdad profunda de la persona su ser como quién capaz de amar y proyectarse el presente estudio busca sistematizar esta categoría dentro del pensamiento maríasiano articulando tres niveles de análisis la estructura analítica de la vida la estructura empírica y finalmente la vida personal en todos ellos el amor aparece como principio de sentido proyecto y donación Marías concibe la condición amorosa como una instalación vectorial que orienta la existencia hacia la plenitud y la trascendencia esta investigación pretende mostrar que para marías el amor no es un tema accesorio sino el núcleo que otorga consistencia a la persona y sentido a la vida desde una perspectiva personalista su reflexión constituye una vía fecunda para comprender el amor como experiencia radical fundamento de la autenticidad la felicidad y la esperanza humanas
